Taking a corner on Newtown's prime King Street is Burger Fuel, a New Zealand gourmet burger restaurant with locations in six countries; thankfully one being Australia.

The casual dine in or takeaway restaurant successfully creates a futuristic vibe and pushes the boundaries of innovation with the addition of its own live radio station. The ad free 'Radio Burger Fuel' station creates a unique experience and is the reason for some new tracks on my iPhone. They also introduced the doofer, a genius invention that eliminates the mess of eating a burger.

The restaurant is an order at the counter and fast table service establishment with bubbly and helpful employees, happy to recommend their own favourites. The televisions are a great source for entertainment too; I was presented with quirky visuals of a horse mascot riding a horse.

Yummy Choices

Bacon Backfire ~ Char grilled chicken breast, bacon, brie, salad, relish and aioli

The crisp lettuce was eye-catching on the plated fresh burger and did not hold back on the elements with sauce and juices from the gourmet chicken dripping; this is where the doofer came in handy!

Kumara Fries with Aioli

The sweet potato chips came out hot and well-seasoned with various dipping options. I also liked the share plate option, perfect to cater for you and a partner.

The convenience of the healthy options available, also catering to vegetarians and vegans, include the essential proteins, carbohydrates, fibre, fresh fruits and vegetables for a healthy diet, making it a conscientious meal decision.
